THE TABLET • 6 JULY 1968

Mr [Pierre] Trudeau is a complex man, but engagingly candid and immensely likable. Trudeaumania made the election campaign the most exciting in Canadian history, and his political rallies drew crowds that rivalled the Beatles in their heyday ... During the election campaign, he told a reporter that Lord Acton and Cardinal Newman “influenced me a great deal”. He pointed out that both were Englishmen, both Catholics, both liberals with a small “l” and “both had very open minds”. Like James Joyce, he confesses to have learned more about the English language from Newman than any other person. The truth is that the real Pierre Trudeau defies labelling, mistrusts political dogmatists and is much more a reformer than a radical. His religious views were never an issue in the election: I was told, however, by a reliable source that he is in fact a genuinely devout Catholic.

The difficulty arising out of the “bone-dry law” of the State of Oklahoma, under which wine for Mass was held to be prohibited, has been satisfactorily solved. Not long after the passing of the Act early last year, the Santa Fe Railway refused to carry altar wine ordered by a priest at Guthrie, on the plea that it could not act as a carrier of liquor the sale of which was prohibited by the State. A suit in the District Court to compel the railway company to receive and deliver the wine failed, the Court holding that under the Statute wine “even for sacramental purposes” was forbidden ... an appeal was made to the Supreme Court of the State, which ruled that wine for sacramental purposes was not included under the law. The Court ... based its judgment on the point that “a thing may be within the letter of the law and yet not within the law, because not within its spirit, nor within the intention of its makers”.
